THE PENNSYLVANIA SOCIETY TO PROTECT CHILDREN FROM CRUELTY

419 South Fifteenth Street

The Board of Managers presents this report for 1913 to the supporters of the Society. Whatever work has been done for the protection of children has been made possible by you; the Board acts simply as your representative and agent in seeing that helpless children in Philadelphia do not suffer. We trust you will read this report, so that you may understand the kind of work we are doing, and the spirit in which it is being done.

MEMBERS' SUBSCRIPTIONS for 1914 are now due, and will be gratefully received. Send to JOSEPH P. MUMFORD, Treasurer, 419 South Fifteenth Street. Additional members and larger subscriptions are urgently needed, to reduce the increasing annual deficit due to enlarging work and rising standards.

The interest of children in protecting other children from cruelty seems suitable and desirable. Children wishing to begin useful lives by helping other children are invited to contribute to the Junior Branch fund.

THIS SOCIETY EXISTS

(1) To secure for children in their own homes, from neglectful, delinquent or cruel parents, a proper standard of care—by persuasion or compulsion.

(2) To rescue children from hopelessly cruel and depraved parents, or from vicious and degrading surroundings.

(3) To prevent the employment of children in dangerous theatrical or acrobatic performances, or as beggars.

(4) To assist in the enforcement of all laws designed to protect minors.

THE WORK OF THE SOCIETY

The work of this Society continued during the 37th year of its organization along lines with which the public has by this time become familiar. Our work consists (1) of home conservation through the determined and persistent efforts which we put forth and enlist others in putting forth to secure proper home treatment for children where conditions have been found, upon complaint made, to warrant public interference for their protection; (2) of presenting to the Court the cases of families in which preventive and constructive work has failed, recommending to the Court the removal of children from parents who have proven intolerably cruel and neglectful and have refused every effort towards reformation; (3) of caring for children who have been committed to our custody by the Courts, seeking to give them the best possible care and training and thus to make-up to them for the abuse and neglect which they have received at the hands of their unnatural parents, and endeavoring, even after having, through the instrumentality of the Courts, removed children, to reconstruct the family life, make the parents again worthy of the care of their children and return the children to them.

INCREASING CO-OPERATION.

The number of complaints which we receive each year remains fairly constant. In 1912 we received 3,971 complaints and in 1913, 4,191 complaints. These complaints involved each year more than 10,000 children.

In our last report we called attention to the fact of increased effectiveness and co-operation among the social agencies in Philadelphia. It is part of our routine procedure to enlist these agencies wherever needed. To no agency do we appeal for help more regularly than to the church, endeavoring to bring to bear upon each family the spiritual aid which can best be given by the church of the denomination to which the family already belongs.

This year again we record a still further progress in co-operation, nowhere to be shown more pointedly than in the fact that this Society has been able to secure adequate care for many of the families brought to its attention on complaint without the necessity of doing the full work itself. For instance, in 1911, of 4,287 complaints received, this Society worked regularly with only 3,380 families, 1,481 of which were new to the Society. In 1912, of 3,971 complaints, this Society worked regularly with 2,964 cases, of which 1,235 were new to the Society. In 1913, of 4,191 complaints, this Society dealt actively with 2,365 families, of which only 660 were new.

PUBLIC AGENCIES INCREASINGLY EFFECTIVE.

In our judgment, this means two things: first, that the Society has devoted less time to families in which there were fairly trivial grounds for complaint, and also, in the second place, that there is a very much more adequate machinery in the city for dealing with delinquent families. The Bureau of Compulsory Education continues to deal effectively with parents who are delinquent in the matter of school attendance of their children; the new Court Aid Committee has taken over completely many families in which moral neglect has resulted in the delinquency of young girls; the Desertion and Non-Support Court has been increasingly diligent in looking after neglectful fathers, especially since the passage of the new desertion law by the last session of the General Assembly. As a branch of the new Municipal Court, with an adequate probation service, this Court should be even more useful.

All this represents, of course, a healthy advance on the part of the community itself through its own public agencies—for the Court Aid Committee, although privately supported, is really nothing but good probation work and should be a part of the Court system of the community—in the duty which the state itself owes to all its citizens in protecting them from cruelty and neglect.

CHILDREN REMOVED.

The number of children removed from their parents through the operation of the Courts is slightly more than in 1912, but both years represent a decrease as compared with preceding years. In 1910 the number of children so removed was 738; in 1911, 564; in 1912, 447, and last year, 479. We believe that the decrease from the earlier years represents, as was pointed out in our last report, no lowering of the standard of parental care insisted on by this Society and by the Courts, but rather an increased effectiveness in preventive supervision by this Society and the social agencies in Philadelphia, especially noticeable in church co-operation.

THE NEW JUVENILE COURT.

The most noteworthy development in the past year within the province of this Society was the passage of the Municipal Court Act, resulting in the establishment of a new Juvenile Court in this city, on January 5, 1914.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT.

At the time of the writing of this report, this new Juvenile Court has already been in operation for two months, and although there are many matters of procedure still to be worked out, the Court has already more than justified itself. Under the old plan, cases involving dependent, neglected and delinquent children must first be heard before a magistrate and a second time before a judge of the Court of Quarter Sessions, sitting as a Juvenile Court; a different judge sat each month and only one day in the week, for the determination of a list of cases far too numerous to be heard in one day. All hearings were public as well as hurried. Under the present system, a judge of long experience in magisterial work, thoroughly familiar with juvenile cases, and in close touch with the agencies of the city caring for children, gives full time, six days a week, to children's cases, hearing each case separately. The contrast is almost the contrast between night and day.

There are still difficulties, but they are, with one exception, trivial and will vanish as the Court has more time to work out its procedure and its method of handling the tremendous work thrust upon it.

ONE STEP STILL TO BE TAKEN.

The one difficulty referred to above, the system so far adopted has not yet obviated. Feeling the importance of separating the hearing of the cases of the delinquent parents from the hearing of the cases of the children themselves, the new Court has not yet been able to arrange for a single hearing—perhaps at a place and time distinct from the regular juvenile hearings—of those cases in which it is necessary both to punish and sentence a delinquent parent and at the same time authoritatively to determine the disposition of the children. This occasions duplicate hearings in certain cases, one before a magistrate for the conviction of a parent, and another before the Judge of the Juvenile Court for the disposition of the children. If the new Court would exercise the power given it by the Municipal Court Act, and consent to sit in a magisterial capacity at certain specified times for the punishment of offending adults and at the same time exercise its powers as a Juvenile Court over the disposition of the children, it would dignify itself by exercising a complete power within a large and important jurisdiction, and at the same time it would save itself, the children, police officers, witnesses and agents of this and other social organizations very considerable time and effort without any loss of humanity or efficiency.

RECOGNITION OF PUBLIC RESPONSIBILITY FOR SUPPORT.

The new Court has thoroughly recognized the principle contended for so earnestly in the reports of this Society for 1910, 1911 and 1912, that the public itself should be responsible for the cost of the care of delinquent and neglected children, properly so adjudged, who should not have to rely for their support upon the fluctuating generosity of charitable individuals, but should be able to be certain of support by the public, among whom the burden can, by taxation, be equitably distributed.

This is a large step forward and places this County at least in line with the progressive states of the Union, such as Massachusetts, New York, Michigan, Illinois, etc., which have recognized the responsibility of the public, either through state-wide or local units, under careful supervision, for the support of dependent children.

THE WORK OF THE SOCIETY

During the year 1913, Judge Staake, then sitting in Juvenile Court, rendered a decision by which certain children could be committed to the Department of Health & Charities of the City of Philadelphia; this procedure has been constantly followed and has also been adopted by the new Juvenile Court. In addition to this, the new Court has regularly followed the procedure adopted in many cases by the old Juvenile Court, of making an order on the County Commissioners for the care of dependent children when their parents either were unable or could not be made to pay for their support.

NEED FOR A STATE-WIDE SYSTEM.

One large defect, however, should be pointed out, namely, the lack of system by which this public support for dependent children is given. In the first place, to many child-caring institutions the State makes lump sum appropriations; in the second place, the County of Philadelphia has to pay for dependent children through the County Commissioners, acting upon orders of the Juvenile Court Judge; and in the third place, the City, through the Department of Health & Charities, has to pay for the cost of certain of these dependent children when they are committed to the Department by the Juvenile Court and when they are otherwise received as deserted children or foundlings.

Thus there are three sources through which public money is available for the support of dependent children. These three sources have no relationship whatever to one another, nor is there any supervising or correlating authority over them.

The orders made by the Judge on the County Commissioners are in the nature of mandamus orders and the city councils must provide the commissioners with money to pay them; the Department of Health & Charities must receive such children as the Court commits to it and must provide for the care of the children whether it has adequate resources or not; and the state itself, through a hap-hazard system of lump sum appropriations, helps to support some child-caring agencies and not others and exercises no kind of supervision over these agencies except a financial supervision.

THE WORK OF THE SOCIETY

This disorganized and hap-hazard and wasteful lack of system is so gross that public opinion has become increasingly aroused about it, and in the platforms of all three political parties this year it is already apparent that the whole subject of state appropriations and state-wide care for dependents is to be taken into consideration. In the opinion of this Society, the following general propositions are important to be observed in the determination of the state's charitable system, so far as this system relates to children:

SUGGESTIONS.

(1) The public should be responsible for the cost of the care of children who are properly and officially adjudged dependent.

(2) In this Commonwealth it is probably expedient that the burden of this cost should be borne partly by the State and partly by the Counties.

(3) Ultimately, the actual machinery for the disposition and support of these children, under such care as will permit of the adequate physical, mental and religious development of the children, should be maintained by the State, as in Massachusetts, Minnesota, Michigan and other advanced states.

(4) If this cannot at once be secured, it is probably expedient that existing child-caring agencies under private auspices be utilized for the care of dependent children, and that the cost of this care be provided by both the County and the State, as suggested above, on a per capita basis for those children, and for those children only, who are definitely accepted as public responsibilities by some public official as, for instance, a Court, or a Poor Law Officer, or some representative of a State Board of Charities.

(5) That the State Board of Charities or some similar state-wide institution should have more authority to maintain adequate standards of child care among the agencies caring for children throughout the state.

This Society would be glad to unite with other interested social agencies and individuals in the endeavor to work out for the next Legislature a plan to be embodied in legislation looking towards this end.

STATISTICS GIVING USEFUL INFORMATION.

This Society feels the necessity of far better interpretive work on the part of social organizations, including our own, than we have ever before attempted. In the files of our Society we have intimate records of 36,000 families. From these 36,000 families have come a part of the children who have, during the past 35 years, cost this community and the Commonwealth millions of dollars. In our judgment, it is time that some study was made of the current records of this Society and other organizations in an endeavor to find out what kinds of causes produce the constant flow of neglected and dependent children, so that the community may have before it some of the facts concerning the source of so very heavy a burden. We believe that much light would be thrown on the necessity for some action concerning such problems as those of liquor, of irregular employment, of housing, of feeble-mindedness, by an adequate study of the families from whom come our dependent children. For instance, in 210 of 300 consecutive cases studied by this Society during the past year, the problem of drink, whether as cause or as effect, was at least an important factor in the family situation. It would be worth while, in our judgment, for a statistical bureau to be established in this Society, or still better, to be established so as to utilize the records of many other charitable societies and institutions, the function of which bureau would be to search the records of the various agencies, in an endeavor to pick from these records statistics not merely showing the volume of work, but indicative of the social problems presented by the tens of thousands of families dealt with and to give adequate publicity to the facts thus secured.

CHILDREN'S BUREAU.

This Society, with the Children's Aid Society and the Seybert Institution, continues to support the Children's Bureau and the Joint Shelter. Into the management of the Children's Bureau have now come many other organizations, enlisted in very active co-operation for the benefit of dependent children. This organization has already done a great deal to further co-operation and co-ordination among the child-caring agencies of this city so that now as never before it is possible to find adequate care for individual children, no matter what particular kind of need they may represent, and this Society is proud to be one of the supporters of the Bureau.

JOINT SHELTER.

The Joint Shelter stands ready day and night to receive children who need immediate care. It gives to every child thorough physical, medical, dental, oral, optical and neurological examination and the treatment indicated by these examinations. The medical work done for the children who come under the care of this Society and, therefore, under the care of the Shelter, is surpassed, we believe, by no medical work in the country. A complete statistical report of the Children's Bureau and Joint Shelter will be found on pages 28-33.

LOSSES.

The Society records with regret its loss during the year by the resignation of Mrs. J. Willis Martin and Mrs. Edward Martin, both for many years active and useful members of the Board.

THANKS.

The Board of Managers, with great appreciation and sincerity, extends its thanks to its legal and medical advisers from whom much help has been received; the press, for giving valuable and friendly publicity to many of the cases with which we have had to deal, thereby informing the public where to turn in behalf of neglected children; and to the institutions, hospitals and other charitable agencies which have stood ready to do their part in caring for helpless children. Finally, the Board of Managers extends its hearty thanks to those friends who, by their contributions, make possible whatever this Society has been able to do in protecting children from cruelty and neglect.

The Object of the Junior Branch

The object of the Junior Branch of the Pennsylvania Society to Protect Children from Cruelty is to interest the children of the rich in service for the poor. Its membership is limited to girls and boys under the age of eighteen years. It is under the supervision of a committee of the Board of Managers of the Society known as the Committee of the Junior Branch. Junior Branch members contribute $1.00 yearly. The payment of $5.00 at any one time, or the enrollment of four new subscribers, entitles any member to the Junior Branch Badge. This badge is a pin enamelled with the Society's emblem. The Junior Branch money is used for the care of children who, as the result of cruel treatment or neglect, require individual care. This Society makes every effort to reconstruct the home, in order that the child may, under supervision, be placed back with its parents. Failing this, the children are often adopted into good families, where they are always under careful supervision.

$104.00 will board and clothe a child for one year.
